Gaza City

His parents lived in Gaza City. He had two brothers, Naji, the eldest, and Ali, the youngest, and three sisters, Maysa, Israa, and Ismeel. He studied at the Islamic University and obtained a degree in media and journalism in 2019. He was very fond of table tennis and won a championship in 2023.

He began producing content in 2018 during the Great March of Return, where he worked as a freelance journalist and photographer for social media platforms. He was wounded four times during the demonstrations by the IOF and had to walk with crutches.

He was gifted with a deep religious sentiment that was expressed from an early age in his relationships with others and made him loved by all. He knew the Quran by heart, recited it, and sang it in many publications.

His family had to move several times due to Israeli bombings, but he wanted to remain in northern Gaza. He was a friend of journalist Anas Al Sharif. He was wounded in the evacuation of Nasser Hospital by drones, along with other doctors and journalist Mohammed Salama. His older brother was detained by Israel.

Like other journalists, Israel had placed him among its targets to be killed. On October 12, 2025, a few days after Israel's false ceasefire declaration, the Doghmush clan, a band of mercenaries paid by Israel, shot and killed him in the Al Sabra neighborhood of Gaza City.
